Exploring Texture

In this lesson, you will explore noticing and drawing visual textures.

You will need:

Pencil

Paper

Eraser

Pencil Sharpener

Household objects with texture

Exploring Texture: What is Texture?

What is texture and where do you find it? What are visual textures?

Texture describes how a surface feels to the touch: rough, smooth, fuzzy, or soft.

Visual texture, or implied texture, can be created by repeating marks, lines or shapes to create the appearance of physical texture in a drawing or painting.

Start with your paper oriented horizontally.

From side-to-side, fold it in half. Then, fold it in half again so you have four sections.

Open your paper up, then fold from top to bottom so you have 8 sections.

Look for examples of interesting textures from the natural and human-made world.

Some examples of places that you might find texture in your home are: a wooden floor, a washcloth, a blanket, fuzzy slippers, scarves, baskets, speakers, crumpled paper, a backpack.

Many foods have interesting textures: lemons, avocados, strawberries, pineapple, bread.

Think about how you would draw each texture. Do you see short straight marks? Lines that overlap?

How will you use marks, lines, shapes or patterns to draw the different textures that you see?

How would you draw the wood grain of a wooden floor? What lines would you use?

How would you draw a fuzzy blanket? Looking closely, the fuzzy texture looks like it is made of many small, curved marks. They all go in different directions.

What values do you notice? How can you change the pressure of your pencil to make lighter or darker marks?

Remember that you can also change the angle of your pencil, how you move your hand and how fast you draw.

Draw a different texture in each box on your paper.

Reflection

How did you draw a texture that looked soft?

How did you draw a texture that looked rough?

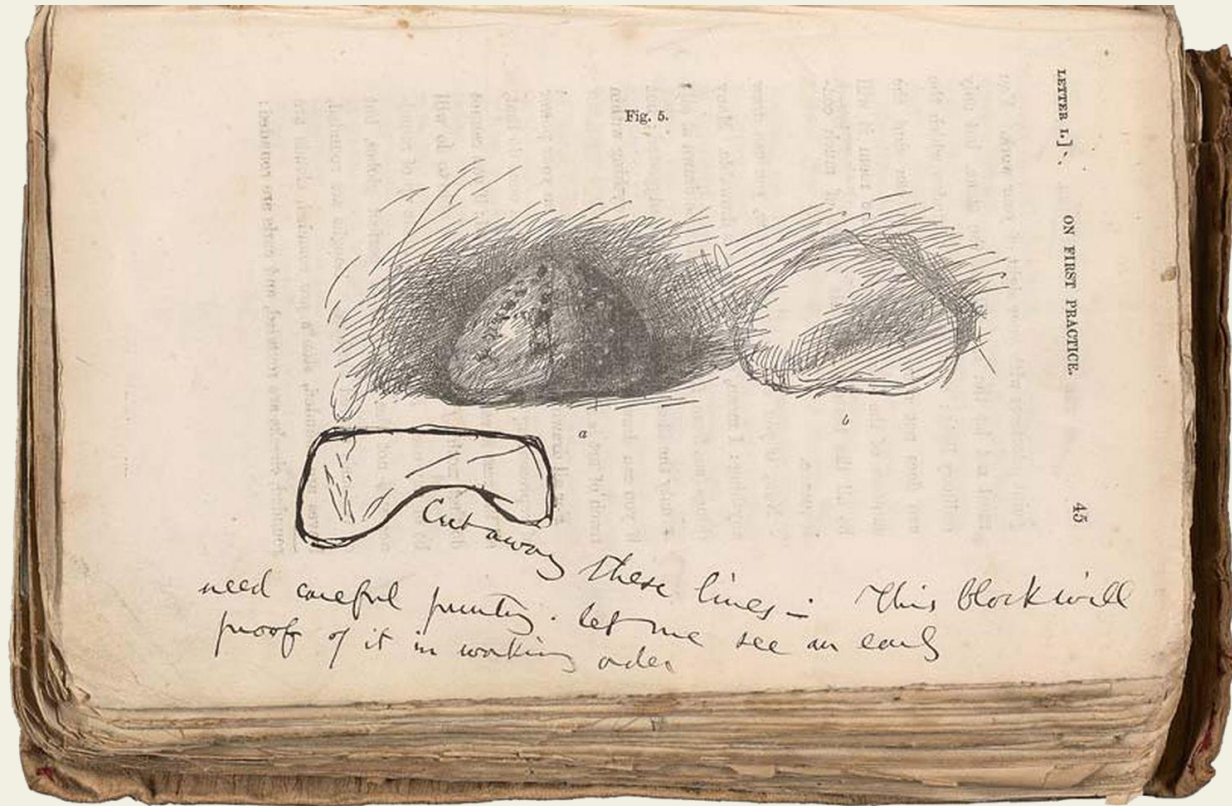

Why do some lines appear to "feel" a certain way?
